

(East side of Main Street, huh.)

/second female voice: That's his picture./

At the corner of Second and Illinois.

/second female voice: That one with the--/

(Well.)

/second female voice: Beard./

(Yeah.)

That salesman they used to call him, they used to call 'em drummers.

(Yes.)

So that's a drummer he's talking to.

(My goodness. They have, in this picture here, they have everything in the world in that store, I guess.)

They did. I'd say they do.

(There's barrels.)

/second female voice: He's blind, but didn't stop him, though. He took a load of cattle down to St. Louis. Rode in the car with 'em. Didn't eat in the train with 'em./

(Well.)

/second female voice: And came back bringing our mother a eight-day clock./

(Well, my goodness.)

And he attended to all the business himself.

(Well, isn't that a remarkable feat for anyone to do all that.)

It is.

(And such a huge store, too.)

/second female voice: He had several--/

It looks big.

(It surely does.)

It was pretty good size.

(About when was this picture made. It must have been made around