

1900 or thereabouts.)

Well, he died in 1901.

(1901.)

He died February 22.

(It would be before 1900 then.)

Yes, it would be.

(Just from the dress that these men are wearing here, it would pre-date 1900.)

Uh-huh, it would.

(It would have been interesting if we could go back and see a store like that now. All things that we could have passed on, and have been forgotten about, and never known by my generation.)

No.

(That is most interesting.)

--Vinita.

(Born and raised here.)

/second female voice: I'll tell you about back of that store.

RECALLS CUSTOMS AND HABITS IN VERY EARLY DAYS

(Yeah. What was it like when you were little children here?)

Well, we had fenced-in yards and we stayed in those yards.

/second female voice: And wooden sidewalks and porch store there, the porches to the stores were built high because they had these drains and they had to back up./

(Yeah.)

And then they would just take the goods right out. And there were wooden steps going up there to the porch.

(Well.)

/second female voice: There was a row of saloons down there and I had to go by them to go to school. Well, I would go out in the street rather than go up those sidewalks./
