The Pheasant Hill Church also had a Mission School for the Cherokee children of those frontier days. It was here in the 1860s that hev. Ard Hoyt and Nev. William Charberlain had spent some time, althought their ... ork was throughout the old Cherokee. Nation. The establish why of the Mission was thru-the efforts of william Chamberlain's son, Amory Netson Chamberlain and his wife, Eunice Hoyt, with nev. Mamilton Balentine and his wife, Anna Hoyt. Mrs. Chamberlain and Mrs. Ealentine-wore granddaughters of Mev. Ard Hoyt. & In the area at that time there were not many families and all of them were part or full-blood Cherokees. That was in the 1860s, and the town of Vinita (or Downingville, as it was priginally known) did not exist. Heigher was there a railroad at that time, and their nearest trading conter was in Kausas, Lissouri, or at nt. Gibson. The early day Pheasant Hill Church many years later became the First Presbyterian onurch in Vinita and this year the church will.observe their 100th anniversary.

Liss Balentine brought out a copy of a photostated manuscript "Historical Sketches of the Cherokees". This historical 70-page document was written by hir great grandmother, Lucy Lowrey (Hoyt) Keys, under her Cherokee name, Mah-ne-nau-hi, and the was a full-blood. The original of this manuscript is in the Smithsonian Institute, numbered BAE MS 2191. Just one of the many interesting passales in her writings is reference to a time in Georgia when Sequoyah was at her parents home getting ready to return to Arkansas Territory, and which was the last time he was ever seen by his people in Georgia.
