

Did you find the other one west of Copan over yonder, Leno cemetery.

(I haven't been over there yet. I want to go through there.)

You can see it from the road now.

(Yeah.)

That big ranch. That Mullendore owns that.

(Yeah.)

Cleaned all that out and you'll see the stones there. See them from the road. It's over there by that lake.

(Third male voice: What was the name of that one we went to yesterday?)

(Oh that was the Bezoan)

Third male: What?

(The Bezoan. Over by Nowata.)

(tape skip)

(Now the--)

Name or anything there, marker of any kind.

(Yeah.)

But its--but there's quite a few white folks burying in there now.

(Well.)

It's time they put a stop to that. See they wasn't--wasn't cost nothing.

Lot of 'em didn't want to have to buy lots or nothing. They bury 'em over there. Well, that thing is just about full. Lot of Cherokees and Delawares both in there. It could be for either one. And Indian as far as that goes regardless of tribe.

(Oh yeah.)

Could bury there. Whites are not suppose to bury there. But they got to burying there. 'Cause they stop that.

(Now out in the Falleaf cemetery there are a lot of unmarked graves there.

I wonder when they started burying there. Was that--would that be back
