

(That's right.)

The white wonder why these Indians don't take care of their cemetery.

That's the reason lot of 'em got that--believe in that.

(They believe that way.)

They say when you take 'em and bury 'em--My uncle George, heck. He never went back there. They couldn't make him. Didn't mean a thing to him. He said, white people does that. He's in Lenapah. Leave a little while. Not the white fellas. These bones, even they're gone.

(Yeah, eventually there's nothing there, but dirt and dust.)

That's right. They go back where they come from.

(Yeah.)

I guess there's a lot of truth in that. Look where they come from.

No telling where.

MORE ABOUT INDIAN BELIEFS CONCERNING LIFE

(The Indians have some beliefs that have a lot of sense to them.)

Yeah. You take that one there for instance. Where you take a bury a person, well that body that's just like a suitcase or something. It's outside covering all it is.

(That's all.)

Just pray for the soul. That's all. That's all it is.

(It wasn't made too last too long either. Just a short time of maybe sixty years at the average. 70 years.)

Yeah, 60 or 70 years. Few of 'em lives beyond on that. Very few.

(Very few. When its served purpose then there's something else beyond on that. We don't know about. I don't know why. We'll find out maybe someday.)

Lot of people believes in it. Lot of 'em don't believe in it.

(Yeah.)
