

(Did they used to have a passenger train on it?)

When we moved here twenty years ago, there were two passenger trains going each way every day. We could ride the train any time we wanted to. We'd get on the train and go on to grandma's.

(Well, that would be a big thrill now, wouldn't it?)

Yes, it would.

(Well, then, this used to be a main highway, wasn't it?)

Yes, I can stand right out here at the highway and stop the bus. They stop and let me off out here. Now, we don't have a bus at all and not passenger train. Everything has changed.

(Well, that's right. Even farming nowadays has changed.)

People don't want to farm. My brother lives up here. They don't have any chickens, and they don't milk the cows unless they just have a cow that has more milk than calf can take.

(End of interview.)