

Often (sentence not clear)

(Yeah. Well, there must have been quite a few Delawares over in there at one time on Big Creek and Verdigris.)

Yes.

WASPS - BEES - HORNETS

(Now where does Big Creek run into Verdigris? Somewhere around Childers?)

Yeah, damn you've just got to ask somebody that knows about that.

(tape skip) I just walked up there and just as I was (words not clear - static.) in there. They took in after me and one stung me right back there and I was scared about that. I am sure afraid of those things.

(Well.)

Oh, they can hurt you those if you find'em and they get after you.

(Why you bet'cha those wasp stings. Then there seem like there's different kinds of wasps. I've seen at least a half a dozen different kinds, little bitty ones and big ones. But those big black ones, now they're fierce. Now those dirt daubers belong to that wasp family, now I've been stung by them, but they don't hurt like some of the others.)

No. I've been stung by those dirt daubers.

(Yeah, there's so many different kinds of wasps and hornets, and bees.)

Yeah. Those yellow jackets used to be fierce. (words not clear)

(Well.)

(Well I bet it would. Big old hornet's nest. You know, cut'em up.)

Oh Jim and I went down there close to the old Grease place there at Stoney Point right east of there. And there was a big one up there in an old tree. Gettin along the fall of the year, and we thought the hornets maybe was gone, something. He climbed up there and started to cut it down. He didn't cut it.

(Yeah.)

But he got out of there. Oh, those hornets I'll tell you they--I been
