

Yeah, all year. (Not clear) church then. And there was a church house in Kenwood, and Standing Rock, and they were the closest church there. They are the only churches. When I first remember Standing Rock when I was a little kid, we used to come to the Standing Rock church. Of course, dad was preacher then, and we just come to church. The whole family did. It was just a log house, It faced East.

(Well, just a log house.)

Yeah. We talked about building another church house, and they did. They finally started it, and the man that started it, he just went so far. It just stood there and stood there and finally went down. Two guys from Mose Ridge came up and talked about the church house, and said, "Let's build a new one." Then, they started it. They completed it. It stood there a long time, and they build another house. It was rotted again. Then, Jess Grass and Andrew Bark come in, and some of the Deacon all got to talking about making another new house, new one, again. They started the building the second house. They got (Name not clear) head man to help him. They went so far, and it just stood there and it went down. It was rotted down. (Not clear) come in. There was no money. There was no way of buying it. They sold rough stuff. They raised the money. Of course, they donated a little about 5 dollars apiece around--anyhow, they raised 100 dollars. They started it and completed it. When they got done, they went in there and they moved us out. We moved the church house right up here. Of course, the name still there.
