

(Well, that would be hard if they whipped them that bad to leave stripes on their back. They had to do something or other wise they'll just be wild out there and maybe hurt somebody.)

Yeah, I remember one time, they had a meeting at the church at Kenwood, and they got to drinking, whooping around; and they appointed a law to stop them. He took care of this one man first to see if he could catch him. He had a horse too. Of course, he went on horseback. He was after him. This old boy comes through the road and he'd be right behind him. That made a trip. Finally, this man stopped. He had a wood tied to a horn, it looked like a jug. (Laughter.) He caught him and told him to get down. He got down, and he said, "Get that jug off of that saddle."

He said, "You get it. It's right here. I won't run off." So he took it down and looked in there. It a wooden stop. (Laughter)

(He sure had lots of fun then.)

Yeah, he was going to have wine for sure. (Laughter.)

KENWOOD COMMUNITY IN EARLY DAYS

(Has that Kenwood Community been there long?)

No, not too long. Of course, it's long time now. In those days, there wasn't anything there. Gregg is only place there was way back there.

(Yeah, it's a pretty wild country back in there, I guess.)

Yeah, and rough too.

(Well, that's where Nick Hare and Noah Buck were raised, wasn't it?)

On beyond Kenwood.

(Old Man Pigeon.)
