

Yeah, he only man here in Little Rock--Old Man Pigeon.

(Yeah, it sure is wild country back in the other side there from Kenwood. Not very many people live there.)

No body's there now. All that is under water.

OLD MAN SPADE BURNED ALL OF HIS MONEY

(Old Man Spade lived back somewhere in there, didn't he?)

Yeah, he lived northeast of Kenwood. His son lives back in there somewhere. There was an old man used to live right up there close to the Little Rock Indian Church. He was bachlor. They called him preacher. He went crazy. They said he had all the money on him so he made a fire outside. A man was watching him. He thought, "Something matter with him." Of course, something was wrong. So he went in the house. He went in the house and got a sack about like that. He opened it up and poured the money in there. There were 10 dollar bills, 20, 100, 5, and burned every bit of it. Then, he died. He lived in an old log house.

(Then, he died right there, well.)

He lived in old log house.

(Lot of things have happened in the old times.)

Yeah, sure have. There's an old grave yard--

THE LAKE COVERS CEMETERIES

(Must be where some of the Jumper family was buried.)

I think over there by the Smiths, I think. I'm not for sure.

(Well, that's the same part of country that the Benderbout family used to live, wasn't it?)

Yeah.
