

quick. See, I'm eighty-six. She's seventy. Well, I believe I'll sell it to him and I said--She sold it to him for a thousand dollars down and he pays here a hundred dollars a month. He paid it ever since he bought it. I don't know.

(Well, there's enough people over there to support a store, too.)

Yeah. They'd have a good business. We had an awful good business.

Well, we just had--got too much that what we had. Just couldn't do the work. Couldn't afford, well, you couldn't hire anybody to do anything anyway.

(That's right.)

Hell, they'd take a job all right. All they'd look for is payday.

She'd hire one once in awhile and they'd work two or three days.

Get enough money to get drunk on, lots of 'em. And that's all you'd get out of 'em. So we just quit.

EARLY SETTLERS IN AREA

(Do you recall who were some of the first settlers that came into that country over in there? Help settle it up.)

No. I don't.

(It must be an old community through there.)

It was an old community. There was Comptons, Ollie Compton. Oh, let's see, if I could think of 'em. There's about a dozen different ones. There's a Edwards bunch there. There's seven boys and a girl. And there's four of them Edwards lived to be bachelors. They're all buried right up there at that old graveyard. There's five of them boys buried there. One of them was married, married, well, the third woman before he died ahead of 'em. And she died right lately afterwards.

(Was that the Oglesby cemetery the only cemetery in that country?)

Yeah. There's one at Tyner.

(Yeah, there's one down there. I been down there.)

Old Rube's buried down there.
