

PICKLE DIPPER - HAT PIN HOLDER

Here's an old time pictures. (laughter) Do you know what that is?

(I don't have any idea what that is. I thought at first it was a dipper, but its not though.)

Its a dipper all right.

(It is?)

Oh what?

(With three holes in the bottom of it.)

In olden days when you went in the store to get pickles. There's a barrel full of pickles. You dip'em out of that and the juice run out of the bottom and you got the pickles.

(Oh, I see. A pickle dipper.) (laughter)

My dad had that in Indian Territory days.

(I've never seen anything like that.)

My mother had given it to me or it might have burned up.

(That's made out of wood too, isn't it?)

That's just wood. MY sister down here said, "Oh I'd love to have it."

I said, "Well, I wouldn't part with it." (laughter)

(No, I don't blame you. 'Cause that's something, I've never seen one like that anywhere.)

That goes back well sixty or seventy years.'

(Well.)

(tape skip)

(An old shoe last.)

You don't know what that is either. I don't think.

(Well, it looks like a king size salt shaker, doesn't it?)

Yeah, that's what it looks like. Now that's hand painted and made in Germany.
