

(Well.)

But you tell me what it is.

(Well, I have no idea if its not a salt shaker.)

Years ago when they wore them fancy hat pins in your hat. That's a hat pin holder.

(A hat pin holder.) (laughter)

You know I had some of those things--the hat pins give to me and I threw away. And I could just kick myself. Give anything to have 'em back.

(Well, that's the first I've ever seen of those then. I can remember ladies wearing a hat pin.)

That's really an old one. Now wouldn't be nice to have some of those hat pins.

(It surely would.)

(sentence not clear)

(Used to be here.)

(Name not clear) all of her sisters.

(Well.)

FIRST SCHOOL WAS A SUBSCRIPTION SCHOOL

'Course I'm a sister to them. She an old (word not clear) too. Now that was back in--would be a subscription school.

(Yeah.)

Lucinda Bellen. Well, my brother went there. That's how I know. Now that's all I can recall. You know that goes way back.

(Oh yes. Back in the--)

Indian Territory.

(Indian Territory days. And now Mrs. Egnor, about the old churches.

I don't know whether you would have one at the time you had a school or not. I'm sure that there were preachers. Maybe circuit rider preachers.)
