

You see Uncle Barney, we was out church one time and we had some dried beef. No it wasn't dried beef either. It was pecans. We wanted to beat it you know.

(Uh-hum)

So we went to her house and Uncle Freeland and Uncle Barney took me and Bessie Deersaw down there and we beat that. So I've beat on that.

(Oh. It might have been the same one.)

I imagine so because it wasn't too long, it was just before Walt and I was married. So it was probably the same one. It was a nice one.

(Yeah she had it up, you know where Henry and them used to live up there that old place. Grandpa's place up on the hill.)

Yeah. Uh-huh.

(Speaks Creek. I just wondered about that the other day. But I know it's not there now.)

They had made it out of walnut. (speaks Creeks)

(Yeah. So Barney Gray was your Uncle?)

Well, no. He was cousin but I don't know we just called him uncle. He was pretty close but I don't know. He was on dad's side.

(Oh)

I don't know how close he was.

(I just wondered who his kinfolks were. You know sometimes I wondered about that. I didn't ask anybody.)

There's uh--Jenny you know, Jenny Deer and them. You didn't know them though did you?

(No. Jenny Deer I didn't know--)

They're the ones used to live up there were Chibbon Beaver lives now. We lived there and built that home out in the country and we moved there. (speaks Creeks)

(Oh.)
