

Huh-uh. I don't know her .

(They're from around Holdenville too. (speaks Creek) And I thought that was so funny to me I just died laughing at him. Bertha (words are in Creek). Oh we thought that was so funny. Well it did the way he was going. ((laughter)) My dad was living then. (speaks Creek) (speaks Creek) You know when we was at home. And (speaks Creek) It was one our neighbors going and we begged to go. You know he danced all night. (speaks Creek) (speaks Creek.) Jeanettes darker than Liza and I. (speaks Creek) Boy it made us so mad we ran in there and jerked her out. We can't dance you can't dance. ((laughter)) (Speaks Creek.) We wouldn't do it.

(Well, did you ever take part in the medicine?)

Huh-uh. No. That's something I never did. I think it's just, well now women does too in some places.

(Uh-hum)

Oh. I laughted at a friend of mine. (Speaks Creek). Outside of Holdenville. She hadn't been going very much. She didn't know very much about it but oh she lived to dance. We come back and said, "You know I just couldn't get Ho and You right." I said, "Nora (speaks Creek).

(speaks Creek) (laughter)

(Speaks Creek both women)

(I always hear so much about this ribbon dance too. Did you ever dance it?)

I never did dance to that. Huh-uh

(Oh. Did you ever see?)

I seen plenty of it. (Speaks Creek) I sure would like to have one like that (speaks Creeks)

The colors are so pretty, you know.

(Uh-hum)

My ribbon dance (speaks Creek) you know.
