

them. And it finally kept it come to their door, and this woman said;

"My friend, did you hear those coyotes? He's just about to talk to us.

He's telling us something." And this otherman said, "You all just lay still, and listen to it and I'll find out what it's talking about."

"Tomorrow morning," it said, "right down there below the bottom of this mountain where you all staying there's a bunch of Mexicans. And tomorrow night, don't you all get out..stay in this place all day long till night comes and when night comes you go down there to that bottom and you all going to take their horses away from them. You all going to get horses, and you all going to get blankets--anything like that." This coyote told them that because this man understand the way they holler and what they say. He understands their talk--when they holler he understands them-- knows they say. And this next night this man went out there--these two men went way down--I don't know how far they went--but they came to this Mexican home in night time. See lights--fireplaces where it was burning.

There was a bunch of Mexicans there--womens and kids--they were all talking and kids were playing, just like here at this camp. (Apache Pow Wow, June 1967). There were all talking. These man folks went and stole a lot of horses from them and they took out, and when they got back over there where they was staying they had four horses and they got on their horses and they beat it. They went. Everytimes when they stop those coyotes just keep a following them--keep a following just as far as they go. At night time, here they come and holler and tell them which way to go. And when one of those mens hollered for that coyote right after dark and here comes that coyote and he said, "My wife is very sick, I want you to doctor her." The coyote just kind of growled like and mad and came close to where she was laying and he start licking her arms with his tongue. And she was kind of scared and that mansaid, "Don't get scared of it, that couote is going to doctor you." And when the coyote growl, you know, this foam come
