

thing like my mother does." Chew that medicine and put it on your hands and rub it like that (between the palms) and rub their face with it and their hands--out of my mouth what I chew this medicine and then I would blow this medicine on their face and I would doctor them. Today I doctor three times, and tomorrow I doctor them three times, that's six. And if it's real bad I go ahead and doctor them till I doctor them eight times. So on, I start here tomorrow morning and noon and supper and the next morning I'm through with them. Take them out there, before daylight and I do all the Indian ways what my mother and my uncle told me to do, and I go all through that way they doctor. And in the morning when they get up they ain't a thing wrong with them. They alright. Their face get alright, their mouth get alright. They don't slobber no more. And then you they bring the cals to the front of the house wherever they are put that coal in pan..anything--or go to fireplace and put that cedar on there and there's another kind of medicine that we mix together and then we just tell whoever it is that's sick bend over like that. They inhale all that smoke. Take that feather and put it over the fire like that and smoke that feather--that's eagle feather. And take that and smoke that and we fan them all over, from they head to feet--all over their body. Four this way and four that way and turn around and eight in the back and on top of their head like that. Just fan that bad stuff away from them. That's what that smoke for. And after they do that, they alright, they get well.

(You said they put cedar on the fire and something else. What else?)

And this is the hardest thing to find. You can get it over there
