

SIDE B

(Then after the Stars, the Tomahawks, and then after the Tomahawks, the Gourds, and then the Crazy Lodge was last?)

Yeah.

(You started to tell me what happened to these lodges?)

Well, all of them that used to lead it are gone and dead. They're all passed away and there isn't anybody eligible to run them.

(Did your husband belong to any of these organizations?)

He belonged to that nouxun ana

(Was that while you were married to him or--?)

Before I was married to him he belonged. And then he come up to the Stars.

(Well, did you ever have any part of play in it?)

No. Just go and look on when they dance.

(What were their dances like?)

Well, these--all these, they dance like these Gourd Dancers-- just up and down. And it wasn't a fancy dance. They just keep their clothes on, you know.

(I've heard every now and then about people maybe starting up on of these lodges again--like this Star Lodge, you know. Have you ever heard anything like that?)

No. I never did hear anything. I don't know who would do it, unless Jesse Rowledge did. He's about the oldest one. And John Blackman. They were in it.

(Were the songs they sang in any of these, were any of those songs like the ones that they sing in the Gourd Dance now?)

CRAZY LODGE

Yeah. Yeah. Just like that. And you know when these men drag these trees in, they used to sing them songs--them Gourd Dance

(Songs.)
