

Yeah, they go in. They go over there. My boy went over there and danced. I guess when he was overseas, you know. Well, when he was going up there he pledged that if he come back across he was going dance in Sun Dance. And see, he was over there five years. And he come back and that very summer he went up there and danced.

(Did you have to prepare all his things for him?)

Yeah, yeah.

(Doesn't it cost quite a bit?)

Oh, yes, it costs lots. Well, what all we took--things that we took up there and the groceries we took up there--we didn't have to use it. His brother-in-law--my daughter was married up there--his brother-in-law furnished everything. I guess all that time he kill deer and dry meat and there was just boxes of deer meat and elk meat and they done all the cooking. I didn't have to do that. And he was the one that was going back and forth, you know, to take things to him. And what we took over there, they said we didn't-- They even had bedding for him up there. Yeah. And we didn't have to put out anything. But after everything was over I turn all them things and those groceries to my son-in-law. That was good that they help us. We used to just help them carry food in. But he told me, he said, "Well, all right, I been saving up for my brother-in-law. You don't have to do it. I'm gonna do it. I'm going to take care of him." He did. He done all his cooking, taking things in and all. Our things just laid there. We didn't use none of it. That was nice of him.

(Did you have to make your boy's costume or any of those things?)
