

cattle country. And Baxter Springs was the cattle center. Where they sold their cattle.

(Yeah.)

And from Baxter Spring they drove the cattle, herd, to Dodge City and Abilene. And Kansas City. Know, when I was a young fellow I seen buffalo right back west of here on the plains. Live buffalo. I seen a group of Indian hunters still on their feathers riding bareback ponies.

(Yeah.)

Course they were hunting buffalo.

(Now that would be a wonderful sight to see.)

Yeah. If you have a chance, when you get where you call in, call KGOC and tell them about White Cloud. And I'm planning on -- on an old time Indian out-post. And it's going to be west of here. About four or five miles.

(That'll be a wonderful thing.)

And I'm going to have an Indian village over there. And I want to get out the school kids, the small ones. I want them to visit me. 'Course that's where I have retired to. And it's at the Fortner farm.

(Fortner farm?)

Yeah.

Third person: Portner.

Huh?

Third person: Portner.

Portner.

(Portner!)

Portner farm. It's where I plan on spending my last, few days of life.

And I'm going to be buried either on Lookout Mountain with Buffalo Bill or I'm going to be buried down here in the Ottawa Cemetery.
