

(I wonder why they start putting quilt on top of the casket.. What was the purpose?)

They just put it on just like putting food in casket. Comanche's do that too.

(Just a custom, I guess.)

That was Indian way. When my brother died, our cousin, Kizzie Johnson brought a quilt and put it on.

(Where does your children live now?)

Betty Jo lives in Lawton, Oklahoma. Quinati--Faxon.

(You have grand children?)

Three boys and three girls.

(What does your son-in-law do?)

He works at Fort Sill.

(They're not living like you used to live are they?)

No-o-o. Nothing like that. They got nice house, clean, they got $500.00 T.V., colored T.V. They got piano. My little Nancy--my little grandchild she'll play it. They got clean rugs, good beds, good chairs. They got pick-up and car. They come to Lawton 18 miles away. They have cattles too. He a Comanche, he's a good man. He don't drink or smoke. Betty Jo lives in Lawton, she don't have no kids. She took two boys, I guess they are grown now. Her husband works too.

(We're about to wind it up now, I guess you're tired and sleepy.)

I go to bed 10 o'clock (laughter). I guess it's about 12 or 13 minutes after nine.

(Well, since it's about over you want to say something or anything come to your mind?)

Anything comes to my mind? I think I've said about everything. Well, let's see, they're taking good care of me now. (laughter) And back in those days
