

Yeah, well, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin both got killed--Lon Franklin. They got killed in a car accident.

(Well.)

She was killed instantly and he died in a little while. Now their daughter lives in town. She could probably tell you a lot of history of that country down there. Her name is Drew. Rose Drew.

(Yeah.)

And there's a Tell woman still living. She married a Mayes over here. Alice Mayes is her name.

(I know her)

Is that--do you know her? She grew up down there.

(Well.)

Her dad was one of the early day farmers.

(Was her dad Joel or Samuel?)

No, her dad was Bill Tell.

(What? Bill?)

Bill Tell. Your're thinking about Dawes, I betcha. Morris Dawes. He just lived down here. He never was a very big farmer. He was Cherokee and had an allotment in there, but he never did farm too much. Raised horses and cattle.

(Well, back in those early days there was no bridge across Grand River was there?)

No.

(How did you get across?)

There was a ferry. Ferry over there. First bridge that was built on Grand River was built, now, let me see. Let me get that straight. Until
