

turners. They're white.

(Yeah. Now that one in--what--is there any history to this, old Sellers Cemetery down couple miles south of here?)

I really don't know who started it.

(Its not an old one though.)

No, it's not too old. That school house hasn't been there since back about World War I, somewhere's along there. I don't know whether they had a school there before they built that building that's there now or not. They probably did.

(Yes, it looks like it might have been a school at one time and then later it became a little chapel or church.)

Yeah. They closed it out during World War II. But there was a school somewhere there before then, I guess.

(Well)

Because there's been schools, I guess they were laid out when Oklahoma become a state. So, there's bound to been a school. That Pettit school has been there where it's at now, I guess, all the time.

OLD TIMERS OF TODAY - CIRCUIT RIDER PREACHER - DOCTORS

(Who would be the one oldest person still living, knows about the Pettit community?)

Pettit Community? I really wouldn't know. My aunts over here probably know about it as much as anybody. They're both about 80 years old.

(Yeah)

One of 'em is 76. (Irrelevant background conversation)

(Yeah)

Moved 'em over there from down here. They're just small.

(At one time there must have been quite a few of the Carlisle family and faction through this country.)
