

Yeah. They supposed to move all these. This camp is supposed to be moved over to Tyler here whenever (word not clear).

(Yeah. You know there must have been a lot of--oh, just individual graves through the country that no one ever found. They weren't marked. Probably, they're probably still there. No one knows about 'em.)

There is some of 'em still there I'm sure.

STATE GAME RESERVATION

(This camp area what has it become? Just a government reservation?)

Yeah, game.

(The--deer hunting has improved a whole lot, I guess, since, well, in your're observation and time, hasn't it?)

Yeah. I can remember back, you know, I was a boy like this boy here.

Seen the deer through here.

(Yeah)

Drive down through there late morning and evening you might see a dozen or two. There's lots of deer.

(Yeah, that's one thing the state game department, I think, they deserve a lot of credit for. You know, they imported some in here to get them started again.)

Yeah. Back in long about 19--early '90's, they had some white deer down in here. But I haven't seen one of them since that year. I was, suppose they probably got killed out.

(Yeah, may have. Were there any elk transplanted this side of the lake?)

Yeah. I think there's some down here.

(Yeah. I know they took some over in the Cookson Hills.)
