

Highway 66, a big trailer court there. They own that house. So, if you will, she could give you a lot of information there that could be valuable to you. I think she's in bad shape. But she's able to think, able to -- be up and around.

(All right I'll see her. But did you know anything about that little one that I mentioned on the other side of Auto Creek there?)

Yes, not--not exactly never was close to it, but now--there's a fellow telling me about that. I'll tell you what you do. Do you know Ed Housingfox?

(No I don't.)

Well, I'll tell you just as you go up on this section line here and cross that railroad track right there half the time you hit 80 or 90 north, Claremore. It's the first house on the west side of the highway, and their yard is always pretty well decorated there--

(I know where it is.)

It's a five mile. He--married Joe Ross' niece.

(Yeah, yeah I know where that place is.)

And-- I'll tell you, might be able to give you some more information, because Ed is the type of guy that has lived in Rogers County, here for several years, and he's smart, and he's worked all over Rogers County with this Soil Conservation.

(Yeah, he'll know a lot of things then.)

CEMETERIES

He sure will. Now--you've got this cemetery--Washington Cemetery?

(No not in this book, no I have though.)

(Name not clear)--he's president of this Arkansas National Bank. And he gave me that information one day when I was talking to him. That's the old Wofford Ferry, out of--on the Verdigris. And that is Wofford-- the
