

acquainted.

(Well, when you gave him this blaze-faced horse with the stockings, had he given you something before that?)

Yeah.

(Interruption--recorder turned off for a few minutes.)

(I just want to finish up and I was asking you about giving away these horses.

I was asking you how you got acquainted with this Kish Hawkins--this Cheyenne.)

I don't know how they got acquainted. My daddy's the one that got acquainted with him and they start giving.

(You know when you all got that blaze-faced horse from Apache John and you gave it to him, before that had he already given you all something?)

Yeah, he give us that buckskin horse.

(Is that the one that you later gave to the Comanche--the one he kept till he died?)

Yeah.

(When someone gave you something like a horse, could you ever give them back something else?)

You can if you want to. You can give a beef if you want to.

(Do people ever do that?)

I don't know if they did or not. They probably do.

(When the Arapahoes came down here to visit, would they all be give something, or just certain ones?)

Oh, they got something--like material or things like that.

(Would the women get anything, too?)

Yeah. They're the ones that get this material.

(When you all went up to Greenfield when you used to go up to the Sun Dance, would you ever be given anything up there?)

No.
