

do you live?" And I try to direct them as to where I live. And they say, "Oh, do you live down there where Chili Fish used to live?" And I say, "Yes." I said, "I live just a little ways from the place." And they say, "Well, are you Chili Fish's granddaughter?" And I say, "Yes." And they want to know who is the father. And I tell them, "Noah Fish is my father." Says, "Oh, yes. I know him very well. And I knew Chili, Allen and Young." And it makes you very proud to know that people still remember him. And I know a lady not so long ago told me that--well, in those days, it was understood, or it was told to me rather that my grandmother did go church at the time, but I don't believe my grandfather did. If he did, he probably went occasionally. But nevertheless, I'm sure he knew that there was a Lord because this particular party told me--said that her father had died many years ago. And that he was in the funeral home, and he was a great friend of my grandfather's. And said he came up to the casket; he looked at the body and I don't know the party's name but he names him, and he says, "You've gone to the great hunting ground." And he says, "Soon, I will see you." So therefore, you know, he knew there was a Heaven. And evidently, he must have known which we all should know if we're truly a Christian that there is a place for us and that we should have that feeling knowing that we will be there also with no doubt. And this is a great remark that she had made. And I said, "Oh, I only wish that I could have heard those words." And she said, "I only wish that at this time when this was all coming that I had a tape recorder that I could tape this because I could just see him now." She said she actually saw him standing there and say those words. And it just makes me feel like, oh, I wish I was back there, and I could have heard these, you know, to think about all these things. My grandfather and grandmother, Chili and Ellen Fish, had ten children. And
