

is the reason why my dad didn't receive his education. They more or less educated the women. I don't know why. It seems like it would be the other way around, but they educated the girls more than they did the men. I believe one of the daughters wasn't educated, but she's capable of handling her own personal affairs. I feel like this wonderful too. And I know dad has made the statement a lot of times, and which I know is true because if he only had an education, then he would have been possibly a rich man by now. Even been higher than what he is. Due to the fact that he doesn't have his education and doesn't have the ability to figure and all this leads him down to ordinance worker only. And I can understand his situation there. My father has stated several times when my brother started to school, he's very anxious to start at the age of four, but they let him start at five. And therefore, he got out of school at the age of fifteen. And from there he went on to Haskell one year. During the period of high school which he attended Wewoka High School. He also attended elementary school at New Model. In high school, he took shorthand and typing and worked there in Muskogee several summers and then went on to Haskell. He's come back and work at Muskogee again. He went on to Haskell and then in the environment of going to public school, he found that Haskell just wasn't what he had expected. It was an adjustment to make, and it just didn't seem like they were offering much. In other words, what he had learned in high school here, he was doing actually the same thing he had done or he had learned in high school at Wewoka High. So, he felt this was a waste of time. So then, he came on back home, and like I said, he worked through the summer. Then, he started to school at Tahlequah and went half a semester there. No, he went over a year there. Then, from there, he went to OBU. And then, he was going there, and then the service called him. During this
