

home. Had my own children, my husband. But after my husband left me, well, I still at home with my children. Never did marry and I raised all my kids that I had, myself. My baby was a year old when their daddy left me. So they're all grown now. I just thank the Lord, that the Lord give me a chance to raise my kids to do right and know what is right.

(Did you meet him as you was growing up here in Hulbert?)

Uh-hum. Yeah. Yeah, I met him going to church. That's how we met was going to church. We didn't meet at, like a picnic or something like that. We first met each other at the church.

(So you became interested in one another and finally got married and settled down?)

Yeah. Yeah, settled down.

(How many children did you have?)

We had ten.

(Total of ten?)

Well, we had nine, me and him did. I had one extra step-daughter when I married him. Had nine by me. But I've just got four living what we had and one, Turn, that oldest one I'm talking about has five, three girls and two girls what I got living, right now. But I thank the Lord that he gave me a chance to do that much. But I'm still sitting here with them. I don't know when they're going to get tired of me. Well, she's the only one that's here now taking care of me. (laughter) I don't know how long she's going to stay with me. She's my grand kid.

(Well, they love you. They'll stay with you.)

Well, they all comes around. Comes Sammy, he's living close by me now, again. He moved to Hulbert.
