

now they take everything out of a human. When one spoils after death and if we smell or inhale the stinking smelly spoil human, that would make you get sick and if they didn't get an Indian doctor for it they died. That's the kind of sickness the white didn't know about.

Indians used to get themselves doctored before and after death, in order to be healthy.

Indian doctors are getting scarce now. I doctor for good cause.

If a man or woman has pains in joints. You find a turtle shell and scratch you paining place and that's good remedy for that. I'm going fix you some medicine for your pains. There are some that uses wrong ways.

(I have a grand daughter that has skin trouble. She has skin trouble call allergy.)

I don't tell that to everybody but just in family. I doctor soap and use cedar and wash her body and we will try it out. I doctor my grandson and he had same thing so they said he got over it.

Long time ago Indians learn to doctor by ways of listening to whispers from someone. They sat up all nite doctoring someone. Medicine man was suppose to take care of himself. They had some rules to go by.

Indians called their God, "Ofoanka" Man with Power.

We Indians should have taken good care of ourselves and we still would have good doctors.

My grandfather was a good Indian doctor. His name was Ja ko chee.

If they got shot, they used to doctor themselves.

Indian sickness is different from white doctor diagnosis.

If an Indian doctor dies you are suppose to put in his casket some of his favorite food or his spirit would get hungry.

Indians use to doctor themselves when they played "stick ball games" so