

(I've heard it called buffalo grass.)

No, it's not buffalo grass, See the Indians, I don't know what the English name (Apache name). It means grass that penetrates. See, you take a little of this it goes right through your clothes. Especially socks. This just goes right through your socks.

(Walks to another area.) (What is that?)

Milkweed.

(Did the Apache use that?)

I don't know what they use it for, but there are 2 or 3 kinds of that milkweed.

(Walks to another area, looks at some seed pods.)

Stick through there (through seed pod) and you can make a top out of them. Spin them and have contests on them if you want to. They're not ripe yet. When they get ripe, they're about this big (about 1 inch diameter.) You get one of them balanced you hit them and boy they'll spin there four minutes.

(What do you call those?)

SOLANUM (Top):

Well, b o o (Spelled out) boo (boh)

(Is that the Apache name?)

Yeah. That means top. We'll all make one apiece and we'll wager, bet, one ~~schaber~~ or whatever it is. At the same time, but the one that spins the longest wins. It takes skill to make them balance, but these are a poor variety here. Where they grow taller and more firm you know what I mean, when it's perfect, those are the ones they use. But these they're wild. They're better in that wheat field. You see them in that wheat field? That's what they use. You see them in that sand country? You take them
