

Kinda back. Really I just don't remember the name that they give the cemetery. They just called it over at the Duncan Chapel.

(Duncan Chapel.)

So must have been--well that's about all I ever knowed.

(Yeah.)

If anybody was buried, it was over at the Duncan Chapel.

COUNTRY STORES

(Well, in those early days was there any stores around the country that you folks traded at or--)

Yeah. Ed Lundy had a store.

(Well.)

And then there was a store at--that was the only store. And then, let's see, the next one was at Needmore, I think. And there's another store way over towards the river bridge, but I forgot what they call it.

(Was Needmore a little town or just a store there at one time?)

A store.

(Yeah, well, no Needmore. Where old Needmore used to be.)

There was a little town.

(Well.)

This Lundy store had a blacksmith shop, had a doctor there.

Woman: Had a post office there.

CYCLONE IN 1906

Had a post office there. And that's--that just about all. Came along in year of 1903 and '04 and we had a cyclone. And it blew that place away.

(well.)
