

(Well, when I first heard about him, was maybe in the historical records there at the University where he had traveled during 1930's, I believe it was.)

Georgia: Mmmm-hmmm.

(Gathering up old records and information about the Cherokee Nation. You say you traveled with him too some?)

Unidentified voice: I went with him lot of the time.

(Well, I guess, you saw some wild and wooly places too.)

Unidentified voice: No, it didn't seem so wild and wooly to me.

Georgia: She liked the country.

(Oh, she did?)

Georgia: Yes, I did. (laughter)

(Well, I tell you, I seen some wild ones. You have to get out of the truck and walk a half a mile through the woods hunting or something.)

Georgia: Yes, you do.

Unidentified voice: And he--while we were in Tulsa, he took me up and introduced me to a man there. I think he said it was Marlin.

(Oh, Marlin.)

Unidentified voice: Marlin, that's right.

Georgia: LaVina.

Unidentified voice: Huh?

Georgia: What was grandma's--that lady that come down here so much. She has some (not clear). Was he a senator?

Unidentified voice: Well, he was a Justice of the Supreme Court.

Georgia: Oh, yeah, uh-huh.

Unidentified voice: Justice of the Supreme Court. (not clear) one*tribe.
