

My grandmother was a Ward.. In fact, the reason that I been--I've had my Indian side--have you seen one of these books?

(I have one, yes.)

Do you? Aren't they wonderful?

(They certainly are.)

I have a little granddaughter out in California that wrote me the other day. And she said she was going with--you haven't got that thing on now, have you?

(Yeah, it's on now.)

Going with a Shawnee boy out in California, and she was kinda interested in his family affairs, and she said she'd like to know something about her side, on the Cherokee side, So, I got this out last night--was going to send her an excerpt from it, but I hadn't got to do it yet.

(There's a world of information in that---)

Yes, and I got another one or two. And then I have a cousin down at Siloam Springs. One of my dad's brother's boy that has almost complete history of the Indian side and the Gunter side. He been back all through the south--he went to the cemeteries and got the stones, got the information off of the monuments and things. Oh, he just has the most wonderful record I ever saw.

(Siloam Springs, what is his name?)

Cal, Dr. Cal Doer, I believe he goes by Dr. C. D. I happen to have a envelope here that got his address and things.

(Mmmm-hmmm.)

No. I guess I don't have it right handy. But I--it's a two-hundred--his address is two hundred and eighteen, Right Street, Siloam Springs.

(Always interested in history, and I like to share our knowledge and experiences and hunting up these old things. Thank you, ma'am.)
