

They used for church and all. Then when--long come 1907 when they built it right over there where that house is just south of--

(Yeah.)

On that side, that's where the old schoolground was. Well, in--

'course that's where it got its first name was what--(words not clear)

(Well, that's most interesting)

Where that old ferry was is they called it Frozen Rock Ferry.

(Yeah. I've often wondered--)

--chemical plant now.

LAMENTS LOST HISTORY -- RELATES MUCH

(Yeah. ~~You~~ know if a person can find someone that knows some of the early history of these places and get it written down. It's real interesting to preserve because so few people know about places or how they originated.)

Well, that's where it got it's name. It was from that old Frozen Rock prairie. Of course it was way back there. Right on top of the bank of the river, upon the bank. And on the south side of the road is some little plot of graves there that were left there during--in 1864.

That's the Civil War, you know.

(Yeah.)

And, of course, they evidently had some battles along there.

(They must have had.)

Right down about a quarter of a mile from the ferry was a old log house. Hewed logs. It had one of those big breezeways. 'Course it was an extra large one. And they said, during the Civil War they used that for a hospital. It was that large.

(Well.)
