

He's a money hunter but he didn't find it. He said "I'm going over on the hill and see if I can locate that money buried years ago." I said, "Well, O.K." He was there, he would always ask me could he go out--he had to go through our gate, you know, to get over there. He left his truck there and--he said "I'd like to find it." One man did find a sack of silver that had $800 in it.

(Well.)

Uh-huh. Way down there. And I know of lots of people plowing up money.

(Yeah.)

It's all uh--it was all silver though. It wasn't no paper money.

(Huh. No paper money wouldn't keep too long.)

No it wouldn't.

(In fact, I guess they didn't have too much paper money--)

Huh-uh.

(In those early days, did they?)

I don't guess they--(not clear)

(It was all gold and silver.)

And I always believe what George Houston said, too, he said he knowed his daddy knowed about it.

(Yeah.)

That he knowed these guys that had this money,--then but there was somebody a following them and then that was about to take it away from them you know. And they just stopped and buried it, and they claim its buried right there close to that Cave Spring up on that hillside somewhere. But they can't find it.

(Yeah.)
