

picture, and mother and grandpa got to arguing about it. And I don't guess (sentence not clear) .

Unidentified voice: No, (not clear) (Static on tape.)

-- Maybe, both of them. Anyway I think Tennessee or somewhere.

(Well, they came from all over that area.)

But my grandpa, my grandma's husband, he came from Missouri. Of course, (not clear), and I think they traveled from Tennessee to somewhere in Missouri and then from, I mean, from the east. She lived and died there, right there in that country then over there -- on that hill.

(Where was she buried?)

Hogan.

(Hogan?)

Yes.

GRANDFATHER OWNED A HUMANN RIFLE

(There's lot of history to that little part of that country over there, uh --)

Let's see, and my grandpa -- there's -- we're gonna go down and get (words not clear). There's some people in Tahlequah got the family tree and family Bible, and they can tell you. 'Course, they didn't call it stealing then, but that's what I call it now. After grandpa died, they just come in here and took all of his stuff. They even got his Humann rifle, see.

(-- are probably about the fiftieth different person that I have talked to and they have volunteered in the conversation the -- the mention of the Humann rifle. It is a very historic and valuable gun nowadays among collectors. And I'm trying to get the story about it or get some information that I can get on it.)

Well, I mean, they -- they wouldn't let -- they, I don't know whether I can get the gun or not. But the lady that told me and Barbara that if we
