

(This Beaty's Prairie now, is this it through here?)

Well, I guess you'd call it the edge of it. Get on back down here, you'll see it better. Jay's fifteen miles from here.

(Beaty's Creek and Beaty's Prairie has been mentioned a lot in history, I know. (Interruption) Beaty's Prairie right through here where all this open country is.)

Yeah. Wet Prairie.

RECALLS SOME OF THE PLACES AND PEOPLE

(Wet Prairie. Old John Lowrey.)

And he had a son, old John--

(Interruption)

(Well, did they call that Lowrey community or just Lowrey store?)

Just plain old Lowrey store. Its kind of a little community place.

(Interruption)

(May the first.)

Yes sir, its right off on the left there. Around that corner, you know.

Grows in there every year.

(Just that one spot there.)

Just that one big spot.

(Well that's most unusual. It could well deserve the name of Prairie Cove then.)

(Interruption)

(John Watermelon.)

Yeah. Right down in there.

(Yeah. That was back up on Burshy Creek.)

Right up--right up the brush.

(Was he a farmer up in there or just--?)

Just an old Indian fellow who would come to town every day.

(Well.)
