Texas Trail:

(Yeah.)

I don't think that it went there. I don't think so because I -- this old boy was pretty old in there and he was nothing buy cow puncher all his life, ever since he come out here. And he picked up a lot what the old timers were doing. And that's where I told you that Rocky Ford, west of Chouteau (words not clear) because he told me that. And just about on the right angle, too, where it would be.

(It certainly would be.)

A MILITARY LANCE IS FOUND - USED BEFORE CIVIL WAR

You know, I found something one time. One time when I was just a kid, we lived out there on top of the hill at old lady Wesley's. Do you know where Charlie Gamble lived? Well, right across the road there, in 1917, we lived there. And I found a lance point I was just a kid--didn't have sense enough to know what it was. But I know now. It was a lance point and it was that long. And it was made perfect. It had been shop made, that was up there on top of that hill right there in front of Charlie Gamble's.

(Well, it was known that the soldiers did carry lances in those days. I've seen many pictures of them. That would have been interesting to preserve and have now.)

It sure was. The only thing that I was interested in in them days was the (not clear). I have got a lance (not clear). It was about that long. And perfect to a stone axe, just perfect. And about the biggest that I've ever seen. No, this always impressed me so much. I ask my wife the other night, we just been living here ever since we were married two or three months when they come down there. We both tried to think. The old man's first
