

name was not (not clear), and he was daddy-in-law of this Jennings up there at Miami, up there at Norcia. (Static on tape.)

(Norcia?)

Yeah, no, I get a big kick out of working with this stuff.

(Well, I do too.)

I was always been sorry that somebody hasn't made more effort. Now, this old Pryor graveyard down here. That just tears me up every time-- I've always swore that if I ever got to be any county official where I had the authority that I'd make some effort to make the trail, make a (not clear) up to that place.

(Should be.) (Static on tape.)

(Sentence not clear). --the thing that Pryor was and what the idea I get at it. (not clear) He fought war of 1812. With Andrew Jackson of New Orleans was wounded there and was issued a government pension, and never did get it. I believe that's the -- is the story about the same?

FAMILY DESCENDANTS

(I think that's the same story I've got too.)

I presume that -- I've heard -- I hadn't -- part of my descendant's name on Baker's side named (not clear). My mother's side, her name's (not clear), which ever you want to call it. They come up from Arkansas after that 1812, probably didn't figure safe to stay in around New Orleans on account of (not clear) defeat. They was part of his out there. And they established a little place over there that had--east of Harrison called Bellfont. And old man Henry's descendants over there. He was among the great-great-granddaddy on my mother's side. There was a little pasture with a big spring right on out side the mountain (static). (Words not clear) and I have heard about it, but I fail to put it together. And I said (static). And Sally Bradon was shot through the head. She had one ear just up and down like that. Bill Bradon down at the (not clear), you know. That was his grandmother.
