

all worthy of being recorded in some fashion because -- )

That's the -- (static).

(Yeah, I been up in that Utah country visiting with -- )

I don't know just where they're at.

MORMONS FOUNDED THE TOWN OF SPAVINAW

(Joe West and some of those other folks up there and the Craigs.)

Yeah, (not clear) now. Let's see, there was family Mormon by the name of West. And I give you some history there. They Mormons founded Spavinaw.

(Yeah, that's -- I've heard that.)

And the Mormons hold that old grist mill that was there they hauled the burr and flintstone that ground the meal in there and set that water mill up. And, then, they had practiced poligamy anyway. There was a number of Indian families that had their names, the Wests, the Youngs, and all them. They are offspring of the Mormons being here. That's Spavinaw, they tell me. Not (not clear) another fellow told me that one of the--one of the Mormons was born at Spavinaw Falls, Connecticut. And when he seen this creek, it reminded him so much of his old home that they call it, Spavinaw. Did you ever hear that?

(Never did, Spavinaw Creek, Connecticut.)

Spavinaw Falls.

(Spavinaw Falls.)

And before then, it was just a creek. And nobody knew anything but that this was just a beautiful creek that time.

(Yeah, that's most interesting.)

This old girl wrote that book. She bases her theory of the Mormons towards my family which--it wasn't nothing to it as far as that goes in the family. And part of that another family that gone up (not clear) running the