

Oh yeah.

(You know, I--from what people have told me. Everybody seemed to be happier back then than they are now.)

Well, seem like, didn't care, time wasn't so much.

(That's right. Nowadays nobody's got any time. They don't even have time to visit.)

No. Every time I made a load down on a wagon or something we'd sit there and talk for maybe an hour.

('Cause I've tried to visit with people. Well, I just haven't got time right now. Jump in the car and away they'd go. Maybe you'd see 'em sitting down on the street there just watching the people.)

There's an old boy up here just works all the time. And said he didn't have any friends just cause he works so much. I said, shoot, I'll be your friend just keep working.

(Why sure. Yeah, you can be friends and let 'em keep right on going. No sir, I just wonder what its going to be like ten or fifteen, twenty years from now. People just getting further away from each other. It kinda scares you to think about it.)

And they don't care nothing about nobody. If you get in trouble why that's just your hard luck.

(That's right.)

Used to they'd come sit up with you.

(Yeah.)

Work your crop out. Do everything.

(Boy, they don't do it anymore.)

Oh I know, that's what I said while ago. I'm sorry but I don't have no time to fool with it.

(No sir, its a pitiful situation now.)

(Interruption)
