

He remembers the encouragement he gave to him. Last time they were at an Alabama Church, Dan Beaver preached in the morning and Coleman Lewis in the afternoon. That was in June, 1964, and Reverend Lewis told Reverend Beavers that he was shown Simon Peter in the Spirit. He told, that Simon was an old man, he was sitting down at one of the twelve gates of Heaven.

Reverend Beavers said that he was shown about the Holy Spirit two weeks before too, and he told his story to Reverend Lewis too. He was shown two Indians and a White Man being punished. One tried to hit and hurt him. In real life, the White Man died in the field and the Indian guys died too. He says always to be nice and not to pay back or get back at anyone.

(I asked him about Quassarte and Alabama, Creeks and all that lived in Texas and he said no one knew about it but him. Even the people living in Texas would not know. I told him I was from the Quassarte tribe and he said they were all scattered. He says there's some in Henryetta, Oklahoma, and some in Louisiana, in West Texas, in East Texas, Southwest Texas towards Houston, but there aren't any towards Houston.)

Reverend Dan said he could talk day and night and wouldn't run out. His mother used to be an Indian Doctor. Not everyone and just anyone can be an Indian doctor. His wife got sick in 1948, she had several brothers, and they wanted her in the hospital. She was in the hospital in and out till she died. He had a light stroke and he couldn't get wood or build a fire for her so she stayed by the hospital. His daughter lived with him for four years and moved. He told about the Indians' separation, about Columbus coming over and lying to the Indians how the Whites' cheated Indians. He tells about the stomp dance they had.
