

You see, there's four songs, they sing this one, then they sing another song.

(Did everybody sing together?)

Yea, everybody sing together.

(What do the words in the song your just sang mean?)

Well, they say I look up to heaven and to pray to God. Said, I pray to God and medicine you know, medicine bag. sé coya means our grandpa means that medicine like we got here. And I'm begging him for something good, that's what it says. And I'm standing on this earth and praying. That's what it says.

(I still don't understand how the men and women are arranged inside the tipi.)

~~How they sit? Well they (men) sit on a row, like a rainbow shape. That's the way they sit, right here. (Inside the tipi relatively close to the fire.) The women behind them, behind the men.~~

~~(But the women and the men are both fill the whole tipi from the south side to the north side of the door.)~~

~~Yes, the door always be east. Well, the women sit way back the men always in front. The fire fight here (In the middle of the tipi) ..in middle. And one be sitting there you know a janitor. He go outside and get some wood, bring it and fix fire. That where he go.~~

(Was there any kind of a moon like the altar in the peyote meetings?)

No, I didn't see any. Well there could be something like that but not like in the peyote. But this one, they got clay, you might say, and they got fire made. That's the way they had.

(Then there's nothing on the floor at all except the fire in the middle?)

Yea, it's the dirt, all inside, lying in front of men, where they sit.
