

(What kind of things did he doctor?)

Oh, I don't know. Whatever it is, he cured it. One time, my dad, they call it witched, you know, something like did it to him I guess. Maybe they had some feelings toward him. Hard feelings, something like that. So he got sick. They went down to the Cache Creek down there. They used to live somewhere down there and they went in tipi. I don't know if it was peyote meeting or something like that, but anyway they went in tipi and this old man, Saddleblanket, doctored my daddy. And whatever that was he said, put his mouth against it, come out. Blowed, he said. He just blowed and you could hear it hit that tipi and just went out. He didn't see what it was but right there he got alright.

(Did he cut him?)

No, he didn't cut him. He just put his mouth against his chest. Took it out whatever that was. Just blowed it but nobody seed it. So I guess it wasn't fit to look at. So, he just blowed it out through the tipi. He said well, I don't know who did it (that is witched Fred's father), but he not going to live long. So which he did, I guess, whoever that was I guess. In no time he died.

(Who was it who witched him?)

He didn't know. He knowed it, I guess, but he ain't never told. He knowed it was all the time probably but he never told who did it. And another man Johnson's grandpa they call him Old Man Josh. He was another man. He used to wear white beads. Old Man, Kiowas call him White Beads. He wear white beads all the time, that's some of his medicine. One time my sister was telling me that one of them bead strings broke, hit the ground and she said it turn into worms. That's what my sister said, and he told her, pick up mybeads. She's afraid you know. He say, pick them up they not going to
