

Mrs. Green: That over there you don't get but one eighth and, you know, one-eighth is small. We get here five and six. And in, (Osage name) told me. She said, (Osage name). I said, what? (sentence in Osage) They cry. (Phrase in Osage) I said, (Osage) what they crying for? They think--They don't like this one-eighth. You know, one-eighth is big, bigger than that 5 and 6 (Osage name). I knew better than that, but I just went ahead and said, it is big, "E-na." You know, one-eighth is not big. 5 and 6 is bigger than one-eighth. That's what they pay over there.

Mrs. Maker: I don't like them shipping in all that oil from over there. Of course, they tell us they're keeping ours in reserve. But now Alaska going about ruining I believe us. 'Cause that's going to belong to the United States.

Mr. Maker: It's going to take'em about, oh, five years before they can build a pipeline down here, you know, to get that oil through there. They're trying to find a way where--

Mrs. Green: Sometimes, I think, what in the world are we going to do? You know, our payment is getting smaller and smaller and smaller. Just look at that last lease, (Osage name)

Mrs. Maker: I know it.

Mrs. Green: Its awful small. That wouldn't even cover this 2,229 Osages on the Payroll. How much each one of us going to get out of that? The dead ones and living ones. You know, that ain't--We do well to get a $100, I guess, maybe $200.

Mrs. Maker: They might find other uses for it.

Mr. Maker: They didn't. Just like they bought--just like that Osage Tribal Council bought air-conditioning last month. Summer is over, but they bought air-conditioning for $4,000.

Mrs. Maker: Maybe they need one.

Mr. Maker: They had one in there. They said, well, it made too much noise. So they got this new one in there. And it just makes as much noise as that old one.

Mrs. Green: Like this one here. When you turn this one here, you can't talk. It makes noise, little noise. My, I heard that's what they was doing up there. I think the next election-- 'cause I think the full-bloods better get together. Not jump
