

And raised our own stuff, cattle and hogs and everything.

Unidentified voice: (not clear)

(1897?)

And, you know, he was the only one in the--in his family. He didn't have no sister and no brothers. He was by himself. And I just wanted to have them, course, but oh, I couldn't take nothing. It's kinda long story.

(How old are you, Dolly?)

70.

(If you don't mind telling me.) (Laughter)

70, I don't mind telling a woman, I do care to tell a man. (Laughter)

Unidentified voice: We been married 53 years old, seventeenth of this month.

(On this place, uh-huh.)

I was in the kitchen washing dishes in the morning, you know, when it was the year we got married, you know.

(On your anniversary.)

Um-hmmm, I come in there with my dish rag in my hand. I said, "Buck!" He was so sick, he said, "What is it?" He used to hate fooling, you know. I said, "What was you doing several years ago today?" I told him--I said, I said, "That's when I went crazy." (Laughter)

Unidentified voice: That time, you ought to grab him and kiss him.

No.

(So, that means y'all been married fifty-seven years?)

Unidentified voice: Fifty-three.

(Fifty-three years, well, you know, that's wonderful.)

Unidentified voice: She was telling me the other day. Then, she was fussing
