

at me, something, you know, sometimes he start fussing at you. That's what he do, you know. I said, "Hooley," I said, "I try to be good to you." I said, "I do all I can." I said, "That's all I can do." I said, "What do you want?" I said, "You want me sleep with you?" (Laughter) And she said, "I don't want you to touch me anymore." (Laughter) "I don't want you touch me anymore," something like that. (Laughter) Well, I just want to know, you know, I thought maybe he want me to sleep with him again, you know. (Laughter)

(Cause he was grabby?)

Unidentified voice: He said, "You get out of here." I'm just like my aunt, you know. (Laughter)

That's what I told Charlie, you know. There was a makin' a well here, you know.

(Yeah, they were drilling a well?)

Um-hmm, Buck was down there. Oh, he was talking big, you know. See that big tree at there, you know.

(Yeah, uh-huh.)

On the farm, he said, "It's been several months since I went crazy when that tree was just about that big," he said. I said, "Well, a minute, I got something to tell you." Charlie said, "What is it?" I told him, "You know, it's been several moons ago since I went out there and stopped backwards." (Laughter) But then he didn't even laugh, he didn't even say yes, I go back in the house. (Laughter) I thought it was funny, you know. I just laughed hard as I could laugh. But he's friendly. He's like you seen him today. He never tells me, "Shut your dern mouth," or nothing like that.

(Well, that's good that you all have gotten along real well all these
