

Unidentified voice: Barns.

Barns, and she went to work down here to the Indian doings down here.

That's why I got to know her. And so --

(Down here at the--that Arts and Crafts Shop?)

Yeah.

(And this business office and all that?)

Yes, and making them old pup tents like --

(You mean the village--down at Cherokee Village, I see, yeah.)

And they did have that kind. Oh, no, they didn't have time, see? They just made that other.

Unidentified voice: Mmmm-hmmm!

Oh, shut up. You oughta hear me--sometimes with some other guys, you know, comes in--walking 'bout that out there. I'd get up and tell 'em 'bout it.

I tell them --

(What granny tell you, did she tell ya'll all about everything?)

Oh, yeah, never got done telling it. She came and got it, you know, they come and got--he come get it--get these her pages of papers, you know. Take it to Muskogee and publish them, you know, and typewrite it, you know. And, then, he had book made out of it. And, so, it's got 3,000 pages in it.

(Foreman Grant, huh?)

Unidentified voice: Grant Foreman.

(Oh, Grant Foreman.)

Unidentified voice: (not clear)

(Yeah, he's historian, I think.)

Unidentified voice: (not clear)

We had our picture taken, you know. (Laughter)
