

It was a wooden hall and had school. And we called it the old Hall.

(Well, it was used for other things besides just school then wasn't it?

A lodge meeting, I guess.)

Do you remember Bill Harlan and hear of George Harlan? You've heard of 'em.

(I've heard of 'em.)

Well, Lucinda, she was-- her people were all gone. Can't think of her name.

She married Bill Harlan. She was one of the teachers in this picture.

(I guess in those early days here everybody had a garden and--)

A few cows.

(Few cows and a bunch of chickens, hog.)

Yes, and hogs.

(They could get by for--)

They managed. I imagine we'd think it was a poor get by, wouldn't we?

(Yes, but now days we think it was something. But I don't guess they had any trouble.)

Didn't think anything about it. Everybody was all in the same shape.

(Yeah and--)

You know, just getting started.

(Well, they were living a type of social life in those days that we don't know today. People were not only neighbors, they were friends and took care of each other.)

They helped one another.

(They sure did.)

Where nowadays,--well, you know, how it is.

(Yes. Someone comes knocking on you door lot of people call the sheriff.)

Why sure. Now here's the old Hall. That's not the first term school however.

(Yeah.)
